

Ends the Life of Dr. T. H. Hood, One of the Leading Citizens of Cynthiana.

Cynthiana, Ky., Nov. 29.—[Special.]—
Dr. T. H. Hood, one of the leading citizens of this place, died very suddenly to-night of apoplexy. He was on the street to-day apparently well, was taken ill after he had retired and expired before a physician could be called to his side. Dr. Hood was fifty-eight years of age. He was a graduate from West Point, from which college he entered a drug store at this place. After running his store for about fifteen years he retired to private life to enjoy the fortune he had saved. He was a high Mason and will be buried by the lodge. He leaves a wife.
